Chapter 1 by Mike Leary

"I could never tell what I've been doing in till I saw you " I said to her. Her face lies cold and silent. A tear rolls down my cheek. "I promised that I would protect you. And I can't do that what can I do" the fires around are dampened as the streams of blood collect and are moving. The dirt mixing in making it clump and flow more like a river. " I ran away from you... Because..... Because I was weak and I did not believe in love but now that you're gone.... No ur not gone this just is a cruel joke. Please wake up ple." I feel cold metal on the back of my neck . I look up it was him. His face cover in blood making it like end trails. His arms were huge and then he swing and I'm motionless my head falls. I see my body on the ground. I am flying up meet the clouds. That girl who I loved was not to far above me my heart sores and I fly to meat her. Her long blonde hair is no longer stained with blood and dirt nor are her close, her scare are not on her. She is the one I've loved are flight cross and cross again her eyes meet mine that blue just like the sea. Our eyes are tearing with joy. I try and say I love you but she kisses me first and I see she knows what I meant to say. We finally stop and walk on the streets of gold and the golden gates meet us I'm up first I am allowed In but when I start to walk in the man says" your name is not here" I turn around and say I'll go with you anywhere. The man say" this is eternal you may not go back" I say "heaven is with her" I fall through the clouds and fall in to fire and I grab her hand as we fall together and we land and that is where we burn together in peace holding each other. Every so often I and her are allowed out for an hour we view our graves. Every time we are holding each. Through the years the snow the rain the sun. No one touches us from our peacefully spot man nor beast.
